Executive Summary:

Nearly three quarters of Pakistanis oppose unilateral American military action to pursue Al Qaeda and Taliban fighters based inside Pakistan. Moreover, a third or more of Pakistanis have a favorable view of Al Qaeda, the Taliban and bin Laden. Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf is also the least popular political leader in Pakistan today (38% favorable)—falling considerably behind bin Laden (46% favorable).

These are among the many significant findings of a new nationwide public opinion survey in August covering both rural and urban as well as all four regions of Pakistan.

Only 13% of Pakistanis support unilateral American military action pursuing Al Qaeda and Taliban fighters inside Pakistan. Among all Pakistanis nationwide, a majority support the Pakistani military by itself—without the United States military—pursuing Al Qaeda and Taliban fighters inside Pakistan. However, only 20% of those in the Northwest Frontier Province, where these groups are primarily located, support such action—with 67% opposed to the Pakistani military pursuing Al Qaeda and Taliban fighters.

Overwhelming opposition to American military action against Al Qaeda and the Taliban inside Pakistan is accompanied by universal disdain for the U.S. led war on terror. When Pakistanis were asked, unprompted, what they think is the real purpose of the U.S.-led war on terror, a mere 4% volunteered any kind of positive motivation. Remaining responses were all decidedly negative, with “breaking Muslim countries, killing Muslims, ending Islam, etc” among the most common, volunteered responses.

At the same time, radical groups such as Al Qaeda have considerable popular support inside Pakistan. While a third of Pakistanis nationwide express a favorable opinion of Al Qaeda itself, 38% favor the Taliban, rising to 49% favoring local Pakistani Jihadi groups. As significantly, only 43% have an unfavorable opinion of Al Qaeda, dropping to 38% with the Taliban to just 24% with local Pakistani Jihadi allies of Al Qaeda—groups which the United States have designated as terrorist.

Similarly, when asked to choose the most important long-term goals for the government of Pakistan, the least important priority for Pakistanis was defeating Al Qaeda, the Taliban and other Jihadi groups.

While a majority or close to a majority picked ensuring an independent judiciary, free press and free elections, improving the Pakistani economy, resolving the issue of Kashmir and implementing strict Sharia law throughout Pakistan as very important long-term goals for the government of Pakistan, only 18% chose defeating Al Qaeda, the Taliban and other Jihadi groups.

President Musharraf, who has publicly cooperated with the United States in pursuing Al Qaeda inside Pakistan, has the lowest favorability and highest unfavorable rating of any political figure in Pakistan today. 38% of Pakistanis have a favorable opinion of President Musharraf, while his principal rivals Benazir Bhutto and Nawaz Sharif, both former Prime Ministers, enjoy favorable opinions of 63% and 57%, respectively.

Musharraf also falls behind Osama bin Laden, who has 46% of Pakistanis rating him as favorable, along with other radical Pakistani Islamist leaders who have similar ratings.

In fact, bin Laden has a 70% favorable rating inside the Northwest Frontier Province of Pakistan itself, where the consensus of American intelligence believes he is now located in hiding.

More significantly for President Musharraf, Pakistanis who hold an unfavorable opinion of him is nearly twice that of other mainstream figures such as Bhutto—as well as Bin Laden and other radical leaders. For example, 53% have an unfavorable opinion of Musharraf vs. only 26% for bin Laden. The sole political figure who garners a higher unfavorable opinion than Musharraf in Pakistan is President George Bush.

Support for Al Qaeda, the Taliban, bin Laden and other radical groups does not mean, however, that equal percentages of Pakistanis support suicide bombings. In fact, 18% of Pakistanis think such attacks are often or sometimes justified, while three-quarters believe that they are never or rarely justified.

While support for the US military action and the US war on terror is quite low, overall favorable and unfavorable opinions of the United States itself have remained relatively steady. 19% of Pakistanis now have a favorable opinion of the U.S. and 72% are unfavorable. The numbers from our last poll of Pakistan in May 2006 were 26% favorable and 64% unfavorable. The United States, however, had the lowest favorable rating of any country asked.

Moreover, there has been a dramatic change of opinion since the first nationwide survey of Pakistan following American relief to the Pakistani earthquake victims in November 2005, which was also conducted by Terror Free Tomorrow. At that time, we found that 46% of Pakistanis were favorable to the United States, and 45% were unfavorable.

Yet, despite pervasive negative feelings toward the United States, a majority of Pakistanis said their opinion of the US would improve if American educational, medical, disaster, business investment, and the number of visas for Pakistanis to work in the US increased.

Background

Terror Free Tomorrow's previous survey results have been featured across the political spectrum by the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), the Heritage Foundation, the Brookings Institution, the Clinton Global Initiative, and at the National Press Club. They have received lead editorials and feature stories in The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, The Washington Post, Associated Press, The Christian Science Monitor, USA Today, The Philadelphia Inquirer, The Miami Herald, The Baltimore Sun, CNN, National Public Radio, Roll Call, The Hill and U.S. News & World Report, among others.

Terror Free Tomorrow is a non-partisan, not-for-profit organization, whose President, Ken Ballen, successfully prosecuted international terrorists, and played a leading role in some of the most important Congressional investigations over the past two decades. Our distinguished international Advisory Board is led by Senator John McCain, Lee Hamilton and Tom Kean.

Terror Free Tomorrow's surveys have been cited by former Presidents Bill Clinton and George H.W. Bush, and in the Congress (on the Senate Floor, by key Senators and Congressmen, and in both House and Senate testimony), at the United Nations, and relied on by the State Department as an independent benchmark in evaluating the success of American foreign policy (State Dept Performance and Accountability Report), and by the Department of Defense in the National Military Strategic Plan for the War on Terrorism.

In the last two years alone, Terror Free Tomorrow has conducted more than twenty-three nationwide public opinion surveys, including in Iran, Indonesia, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Syria, Turkey, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and elsewhere. We completed the first uncensored nationwide poll in Iran in five years, the first ever uncensored nationwide public opinion survey in Syria, the first survey in Bangladesh on international issues in almost five years, among others.

Terror Free Tomorrow's new public opinion survey of Iran—the first uncensored survey in five years—has garnered worldwide coverage and acclaim by leading Iranian scholars and observers. We have also just completed the first ever uncensored poll of Syria.

Our Iran and Syria surveys have received featured stories in the Wall Street Journal and CNN, and widespread reporting in the Washington Post, New York Times, Los Angeles Times, Houston Chronicle, Newsday, International Herald Tribune, Guardian (UK), Jerusalem Post, USA Today, Chicago Tribune, Philadelphia Inquirer, New York Post, San Francisco Chronicle, Christian Science Monitor, Miami Herald, Cleveland Plain Dealer, San Jose Mercury News, Boston Globe, San Diego Union Tribune, Forbes, Yahoo News, AOL News and others throughout the world. It has also been covered by CNN, ABC News, CBS News, the BBC, PBS, C-SPAN and elsewhere.

Praised by leading Iranian experts, scholars and think-tanks such as CSIS, the Iran survey has also been featured in editorials spanning the political spectrum from The Wall Street Journal and The New York Times to the New York Post, from the Huffington Post to the Jerusalem Post, and The Economist to Front Page.

Terror Free Tomorrow was also the first to conduct a nationwide poll in Indonesia after the tsunami. President Bush, and former Presidents Clinton and Bush, all cited the poll as a key reason for sustained American tsunami relief. The US State Department also relied on Terror Free Tomorrow polling in testimony before the US Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

In addition, Terror Free Tomorrow conducted the first and only poll in Pakistan after the devastating October 2005 earthquake. The poll was featured in The Wall Street Journal, CNN and international media. Moreover, the poll served as the principal finding by the US Senate for the United States “to take the lead” in relief efforts to Pakistani earthquake victims (Senate Resolution 356, co-sponsored by Senators Lugar and Biden, Chairman and Ranking Member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee).

In May 2007, Senators Russ Feingold (D-WI) and Norm Coleman (R-MN) have introduced important new legislation to strengthen America's public diplomacy and humanitarian efforts, relying on Terror Free Tomorrow's surveys as one of the key findings for the legislation.

The incoming Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and current Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Michael Mullen, wrote that Terror Free Tomorrow's findings, provided the proof to “one of the defining moments of this new century.”

According to Admiral Mullen, Terror Free Tomorrow's findings have directly led to continuing successful mission by the U.S. Navy around the world, including the recent mission of the U.S. Navy ship Mercy.

Admiral Michael Mullen stated that the favorable change in public opinion documented by Terror Free Tomorrow after American tsunami relief was a “critical factor” in launching the 2006 mission of the Navy hospital ship Mercy. Mercy is a fully equipped, 1,000-bed hospital, which from May to August offered free medical services and training to the people of Indonesia, Bangladesh and elsewhere, including care to over 61,000 needy patients.

As Admiral Mullen testified in March 2007 before the U.S. House Armed Services Committee:

“Perhaps the most tangible application of Navy's global reach and persistent presence in building partner capacity was last year's five month deployment of the hospital ship MERCY in the summer of 2006 to the tsunami-affected areas in South and Southeast Asia. In an August 2006 public opinion survey, conducted by Terror Free Tomorrow, Indonesians and Bangladeshis overwhelmingly indicated their support of this humanitarian mission. In Indonesia, 85% of those aware of MERCY's visit had a favorable opinion, and in Bangladesh this figure was 95%. Further, 87% of those polled in Bangladesh stated that MERCY's activities made their overall view of the United States more positive. These polling results provide real indication of the power of our partnerships.”

Terror Free Tomorrow's work has received lead editorials and featured stories in, among others, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, Associated Press, The New York Times, The Christian Science Monitor, USA Today, The Philadelphia Inquirer, The Miami Herald, The Baltimore Sun, CNN, National Public Radio, Roll Call, The Hill and U.S. News & World Report. Other coverage includes The Economist, MSNBC, ABC News, CBS News, FOX News, Reuters, The Washington Times, The New York Post, The National Review, The Boston Globe, The Houston Chronicle, The San Francisco Chronicle, United Press International, The White House Bulletin, The International Herald Tribune, The Globe and Mail (Canada), The Afghanistan Times, The Jakarta Post (Indonesia), Metro TV Indonesia, Tempo (Indonesia), Kompas (Indonesia), TV/Radio Australia, Straits Times (Malaysia), Pakistan Dawn, The Nation (Pakistan), GEO TV Pakistan, Pakistan Daily Times, Voice of America, Jornal do Brasil, Die Welt (Germany), Le Monde (France), BBC, The Guardian (UK), The Daily Yomiuri (Japan), The China Post, The Seoul Times, The Indian Express (India), The Hindu (India), The Turkish Daily News, The Turkish Press, Zaman (Turkey), The Oman Tribune, The Gulf News (UAE and pan-Arab), The Middle East Times, The Iranian News, The Muslim News, and The Daily Star (Lebanon and pan-Arab), among others. Terror Free Tomorrow has also been extensively covered in blogs throughout the Internet.

Terror Free Tomorrow findings have also been cited in scholarly journals including the Harvard International Review, the New England Journal of Medicine, and important books on American foreign policy, such as The Audacity of Hope by Senator Barack Obama; Peter Beinart's The Good Fight; Tony Smith, Washington's Bid; Colonel David Hunt, How to Wake Up Washington and Win the War on Terror Carnes Lord, Losing Hearts and Minds; and Dick Martin, Rebuilding Brand America.

Terror Free Tomorrow's field partner and project manager is the international research specialists, D3 Systems, Inc. at: www.D3systems.com

D<sup>3</sup> has conducted widely praised surveys in Iraq and Afghanistan for ABC News, USA Today, BBC and others. D<sup>3</sup> is recognized for its expertise in overseeing research projects from design through analysis in some of the most difficult research environments around the globe.

Since 1988, D<sup>3</sup> Systems has developed a particular expertise on research in the Middle East. D<sup>3</sup> Systems has developed unique research capabilities from scratch in Afghanistan and Iraq. D<sup>3</sup> founded, in 2003, the first registered opinion research firm in Afghanistan: the Afghan Center for Socio-economic and Opinion Research (ACSOR). ACSOR has conducted qualitative and quantitative research projects for an international client group including The Asia Foundation, the US State Department, the BBC, the Voice of America, and Radio Free Europe. D3 has also conducted a number of quantitative surveys in Iraq for ABC News, USA Today, the BBC, the Voice of America, Deutsche Welle, Radio Sawa, and others.

Beginning in Europe in the early 1990s, D<sup>3</sup> has played a leading role in the international use of telephone research for opinion polling and media audience measurement and evaluation into denied or limited access countries. While international telephone research from a central site (CATI) is an established method for consumer or business-to-business surveys, D<sup>3</sup> has pioneered its use to reach publics in societies where on the ground, random probability sampling with sensitive questionnaires is not possible.

Methodology

This survey was conducted for Terror Free Tomorrow by D3 Systems of Vienna, Virginia, USA, and the Pakistan Institute for Public Opinion (PIPO). Interviews were conducted face-to-face with 1,044 Pakistanis age 18 or older across 105 urban and rural sampling points in all four provinces of Pakistan. The fieldwork was conducted from August 18 to August 29, 2007.

The questionnaire consisted of 27 substantive questions, 12 demographic questions, and 26 quality control questions. Respondents were selected using a multi-stage random stratified sampling methodology. During the course of fieldwork, there were 2,014 contacts attempts made. Of these, 530 resulted in non-contacts, yielding a non-contact rate of 26%. There were 333 refusals giving the study a 76% cooperation rate, and a net response rate of 70%. The poll has a +/- 3% margin of error at the 95% confidence interval.

D3 Systems and PIPO use face-to-face research in Pakistan. Interviews were conducted by 46 trained interviewers who are native Pakistanis. Interviewers were briefed on a number of items including, but not limited to, the objective of the program and survey details, selection of respondents, the questionnaire (both asking of questions and recording of responses), timing and control issues, and usage of the questionnaire. Interviews were subjected to numerous quality control procedures including direct supervision of interviews in 3.5% of the interviews, in-person back checks by supervisors for 10% of the interviews, and telephone or in-person checks from the central office for 1.5% of the interviews.

The target sample was a random selection of Pakistani nationals, both male and female, above the age of 18. The sample covered all four provinces of Pakistan, with the number of sampling points chosen in proportion to the size of each province's population, as well as both urban and rural strata. Pakistan's Population is approximately 160 million. The population is heavily rural; however, urbanization has been rising from 18% in 1951 after its independence to 33% in the latest census (1998). Pakistan has a federal structure with four provinces: Punjab, Sindh, NWFP and Balochistan. The federal capital Islamabad is situated in Punjab, which is by far the largest province in terms of population size (58%) followed by Sindh (24%), NWFP (14%) and Balochistan (5%). Further more population is divided into the following segments.

Pakistan: Urban / Rural Distributions

The National Census data from 1998 are used as the universe for this sample. The National Census is classified by Villages as the Primary Unit in the Rural areas and Urban Census Circles in the Urban areas. We have adopted the same as our Primary Sampling Units. Using a multi-stage random stratified sampling method, we selected over 100 Primary Sampling Units, comprising Villages and Urban Circles in all the four provinces. The completed sample contains 105 sampling points, in which approximately 10 interviews were carried out in households selected using a random walk. A total of 1,044 men and women belonging to a national cross section in terms of gender, age and other socio-economic characteristics are represented in the sample.

The first household in a sampling point is chosen by drawing slips of paper on which the house numbers which are present on that street are written. After the first household is randomly selected, the interviewer follows a random walk selecting every third household on the right hand side of the street. The respondent (male/female adult 18+) is chosen randomly using a Kish grid.

The data represented in this sample is unweighted. Please note that the data in Terror Free Tomorrow's prior surveys of Pakistan were predominantly urban.
